

You are taking part in a research project about the experience of living through COVID-19, how technology is helping (or hurting), and how the world is changing due to this pandemic. This interview will be conducted orally over Zoom or phone via thirteen questions.

The recording of your interview, photograph(s), and video of you will be archived for use in this project. Each story will be parsed down into a couple summarizing paragraphs with some use of audio quotation in the podcast. I am happy to provide you with any materials I collect today.

This project collects personal identifying information about you. I am bound to respect your wishes to have your identity acknowledged or kept confidential.

By participating in this project, some aspects of your life may be published online and in the book.

The benefit of participating in this project is two fold: a) your history and experience is recorded for future generations and your family b) your perspective of the unfolding events and how it is affecting culture, work, and technology will have lasting impact.

You may opt out of the project at any time, and request any materials about you be destroyed.

You may choose not to answer any question I ask, and also may elaborate on any topic you feel relevant.

You will be asked for your contact information during the interview. This information will be used ONLY for follow-up from me, including information about the project, how to reach me, and what of your interview has been used in the final publication.

You receive my information so you can contact me if need be.

If you are a minor please have your parent / guardian present during the interview.
